

- The time period when the funds will generally be made available.

Exception Notice for Repeated Overdrafts

If most check deposits to an account permit the bank to invoke the repeated overdraft exception, the bank may send a notice complying with §229.13(g)(1), or may send a notice in accordance with §229.13(g)(3). The notice must be sent when the overdraft exception is first invoked. The notice must state:

- The customer's account number;
- The fact that funds are being delayed because the repeated overdraft exception will be invoked;
- The time period the exception will be invoked; and
- The time period when the funds will generally be made available.

Availability of Deposits Subject to Exceptions

For exceptions (other than new accounts), §229.13(h) allows the depository bank to delay availability for a “reasonable” time beyond the schedule. Generally, a “reasonable” period will be considered to be no more than one business day for “on-us” checks, five business days for local checks, and six business days for non-local checks. If a depository bank extends its availability beyond these time frames, it must be able to prove that such a delay is “reasonable”.

Payment of Interest – §229.14

General Rule

A depository bank must begin accruing interest on interest-bearing accounts no later than the business day on which it receives provisional credit for the deposited funds. A depository bank typically receives credit on checks within one or two days following deposit. A bank receives credit on a cash deposit, an electronic payment, and a check that is drawn on itself on the day the cash, check or electronic payment is received. If a nonproprietary ATM is involved, credit is usually received on the day the bank that operates the ATM credits the depository bank for the amount of deposit.

Section 229.14(a)(1) permits a bank to rely on the availability schedule from its Federal Reserve Bank, Federal Home Loan Bank, or correspondent bank to determine when the depository bank receives credit. If availability is delayed beyond what is specified in the schedule, a bank may charge back interest, erroneously paid or accrued, on the basis of that schedule.

Section 229.14(a)(2) permits a depository bank to accrue interest on checks deposited to all of its interest-bearing accounts based on an average of when the bank receives credit for all checks sent for payment or collection. For example, if a bank receives credit on 20 percent of the funds deposited by check as of the business day of deposit (e.g., “on us” checks), 70 percent as of the business day following deposit, and ten percent on the second business day following deposit, the bank can apply these percentages to determine the day interest must begin to accrue for check deposits on all interest-bearing accounts, regardless of when the bank received credit for funds deposited in any particular account. Consequently, a bank may begin accruing interest on a uniform basis for all interest-bearing accounts, without having to track the type of check deposited to each account.

Nothing in §229.14(a) limits a depository bank policy that provides that interest can only accrue on balances that exceed a specified amount, or on the minimum balance maintained in the account during a given period. However, the balance must be determined according to the date the depository bank receives credit for the funds. This section also does not limit any policy providing that interest can accrue sooner than required by the regulation.

Money market deposit accounts, savings deposits, and time deposits, are not subject to the general rule concerning the timing of interest payment. However, for simplicity of operation, a bank may accrue interest on such deposits in the same manner that it accrues interest on transaction accounts.

Exemption for Certain Credit Unions

Section 229.14(b) contains an exemption from the payment of interest requirements for credit unions that do not begin to accrue interest or dividends on their member accounts until a later date than the day the credit union receives credit for those deposits, including cash deposits. These credit unions are exempt from §229.14(a) as long as they provide notice of their interest accrual policies in accordance with §229.16(d).

Section 229.14(c) provides an exception to the general rule in §229.14(a) for checks that are returned unpaid. Essentially, interest need not be paid on funds deposited in an interest-bearing account by a check that has been returned unpaid, regardless of the reason for return.

General Disclosure Requirements – §229.15

Form of disclosure

A bank must disclose its specific availability policy to its customers. The required disclosures must be clear and conspicuous, and must also be in writing under §229.15(a). Disclosures, other than those posted at locations where employees accept consumer deposits, at ATMs or on preprinted deposit slips, must be in a form that the customer may keep. These disclosures must not contain information unrelated to the requirements of the regulation. If other account terms are included in the same document, disclosures pertinent to this regulation should be highlighted such as, under a separate heading.
