If Wal Mart gets their foot in the door of banking they will try to dominate the market as they try to do in everything they get involved with. Also I don't know if the FDIC or OCC have smart enough examiners to properly determine proper operation of a bank run like a retail store. they have enough to do trying to keep up with "ordinary" banks. Why should the tax payers need to form another task force to govern the new type of banking operations. There seems to be plenty of banks to take care of the banking needs of the country without trying to form a new breed. It will probably get a screwed up as the Credit union mess that you have created without adequate supervision or regulation.
